FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

THURSDAY, May 30-6 P. M. The railway share market has not sustained the promise of yesterday, and speculation in Wall street is gain languid. There, is, however, a more confident spressed in the stability of values than there to the publication of Mr. McCulloch's letter to men of the Hub," and as the general inferto that result, an upward reaction on Exchange is expected to ensue as activity supersedes the semi-stagnation at prevailing. The letter declining the prospect of a speedy resumption of specie payments. The letter referred to shows that predictions. The mere contraction of the with which he supported his views, undue was, did far less damage than his talk, and he comes before the public to virtually confess wrong; that his annual report, promising a nption of specie payments this year or at the lates next spring, was a delusion and a snare, and that the mischief he created was all in vain. It is, therefore, clear that in times like these a Secretary of the Treasury ral occasions written and spoken words that a wise man

THE RELEASE OF JEFF DAVIS. The Hartford Courant, May 29 (ex-Governor Hawley), purillo demand that mercy shall triumph over justice in settling the strifes through which the nation has passed. We may yield to elemency what can never be demanded as a right.

[From the St. Louis Democrat, May 28.]

The release of Jefferson Davis has roused more recling and elicited more general comment than any other event that has ecourred for months. It recalls vividly to mind all the enormity of his treason, all the horrors and sufferings caused by the rebellion of which he is the representative. Justly men feet that the journey of Jefferson Davis, a free man, to Canada, means not the release of an individual criminal, but the failure of the nation to punish the greatest orime of the century. Other men, perhaps personally more guilty, the country saw pardoned with little other feeling than the lefty scorn that disdains to take the life of an individual in satisfaction for the wrongs of a nation. But in the person of Jefferson Davis, the official head of the rebellion, the nation sees treason itself released from just penalties. The sword of justice is sheathed. The rebellion itself, unpunished by human power, passes on to that tribunal where alone orimes of such magnitude can meet an adequate retribution.

From the Now Bedford Mercury, May 29.

Treason against the United States consists in levying war against them. But, the new doctrine is, that, if war be actually leved and waged, and thousands of lives are thus sacrified, and millions of treasure expended, then the traitor or traitors, though defeated at last in their traitorous stiempt, cannot be called to account by the government for their acts. The crimo ceases to be a crime, because it has grown to such magnitude. A levying of war, that accomplished only a slight distorbance, or but aroused apprehensions in a State, might deserve punishment, and the guilty party might be tried. But when the act produces actual war, in which a whole people are engaged, the end of the war is the end of all inquiry as to the guilt of its authors.

We do not wonder th

nally reported by the Committee on Bill of Rights, by the large majority of seventy-six to twenty-four, fairly and clearly defines the position of the body on the question. The substitute reads:—That slavery shall not be re-established in this State; but having been abolished under the policy and authority of the United States, compensation in consideration thereof is due from the United States. The original article was simply:—Slavery shall not be permitted in this State. Married.

Minonenta, both of New Jersey. Caucus of the Members of the Convention— They Discuss the Propriety of Saying No-thing Whatever About Slavery in the Bill of Rights, &c. Axarous, Md., May 20, 1867. There was a large caucus of the members of the Convention (some seventy out of one hundred and fifteen members) held last night, from eight to sleven o'clock.

Birth. BRIGGE -- At Berlin, Prussla, on Wednesday, May 8, trs. Charges A. Briggs, of a daughter. mittee, viz: "Slavery shall not be permitted in this State." While all admitted that slavery was dead, and could never be resuscitated, it was deemed by meany entirely unnecessary to insert this article in the bill of rights, it was contended that the amendment of the United States constitution settled that question. And there were none so sanguine as to suppose that any State which formerly permitted slavery would ever, or could ever, attempt to revive it.

But it was contended by some that many citizens of this state had been deprived of their property in slaves, without authority of law, by violence; and while they were willing to acquiesce in the result as one of the stabborn facts of the times, they were unwilling to do anything which might impair their claims for remuneration at some future time. There being no neoposity for the article in the Bill of Rights, and the fear that it might impair just claims against the general government for remuneration are the grounds for wishing it struck out. There are not ten mon in the Convention who ever expect, or even wish, to revive the institution in the State. But there are many who think themselves wronged them, as they suppose.

Two-thirds of the Convention are men of from furty-five to seventy years of age, who have some considerable property in possession, and who hope to retain it for themselves and children. They are so madous, therefore, and deny with indignation that they have ever been disloyal to the constituation or the laws. But they have no love for the political abolitionists, and give them but little credit for sincerity and none for pure patriotism.
